by the 1961 General Assembly. Officials said the action means a concerted drive will be started by the league and petitions circulated with its sanction to force a referendum on the bill creating a new 8th congressional district in Maryland from Prince Georges and Howard counties, formerly in the 5th district.

Arguments presented on the floor of the meeting showed many members were in favor of carving a new district from the present 7th District or creating eight completely new districts with fairly equal populations.

The group also passed a resolution setting up a study group to scrutinize the State Constitution with special emphasis on proposals for more equitable representation in the General Assembly. Other proposals which gained approval from the League were ones supporting a mildly graduated income tax, a capital gains tax, a limited sales tax and additional money for county and city

A $1,000 damage suit and its settlement for $750 were filed together Wednesday in Allegany County Circuit Court.

James C. Angellatta Jr., an infent by James C. Angellatta Sr.

fant, by James C. Angellatta Sr. and Verna G. Angellatta, his parents and next friends, 27 Henderson Avenue, brought the suit against Kenneth E. Deatelhauser and William E. Deatelhauser, 9 East First Street.

The declaration stated that young Angellatta was a passenger in an automobile driven by Kenneth Deatelhauser, which collided with a power pole while traveling nor in on West Virginia Route 28 and two miles south of Ridgeley on February 25, 1961. Speed was cited as the cause of the accident.

Injuries to young Angellatta included severe contusions and lacerations about the head, body and limbs and shock to his nervous system. The $750 settlement agreement was signed by Peter J. Carpenti as attorney for the plaintiffs and Fred H. Anderson as attorney for the defendants.

Another Chink In The Western Armor

It sounded very tidy in Washington: Accept a loss in Laos but beef up strength in neighboring Thailand and South Vietnam to insure against any further retreat. This was the unofficial line "leaked" to the public in the last

Washington must feel a sense of betraval, then, to learn that the natives may not go along. Thailand, fearing the prospect of a Communist Laos next door, is finding neutralism more

Unless the United States takes firm steps to stop the Reds, a news_story reports, "Thailand may leave SEATO and seek security with her neighboring neutralist nations." This is like seeking security in a cage full of tigers, but neutralists often learn this too late.

The Washington planners must have foreseen this possibility when they decided to accept a graceful exit from Laos. But if Thailand goes neutralist, then what? Will it be another Laos in a few years? How long could Thailand remain neutral with a long Red-lined border?

This is the sort of chain effect the Communists exploit so well, and against which the free world often seems ineffectual. As one nation falls, its neighbors are weakened and become untenable, and one retreating step leads to Laos has been written off as "the worst place in the world to fight a war." But will the West ever be able to choose its ground?

Presidential Responsibility

The assumption of many students of American politics is that the President, being the chief executive officer of the United States, who with the Vice-President, is the only nationally elected official, is alone responsible for the conduct of government.

The Founding Fathers had a difficult time getting around the fact that they could not provide for a king in the Constitution. No principal European country, at that time, was without a monarch. Also at the time of the founding of the United States, the office of Prime Minister had not yet developed so that the Head of State was excluded from all executive and administrative functions. George III continued to interfere in the function of the government and Louis XVI had not yet been decapitated.

Upon the President were heaped the responsibilities of the Head of State and those of a Prime Minister. The experiment was a very successful one until the government became so complicated that in some instances the President could not know what was happening in some agencies until he read about it in the newspapers.

For the President then to assume total responsibility for all the activities of government is an absurdity. Even in the conduct of foreign affairs, there are so many agencies, that the President may or may not know, in advance, how each is carrying out his policies.

The State Department is, of course, the central agency of government dealing with foreign relations. But then there is the CIA, an extraordinarily complicated mechanism in charge of espionage, counterespionage and paramilitary activities (cloak and dagger stuff). Then there is the ICA which distributes the aid we give to foreign countries and in this category there are several other agencies, some strictly American, some international with Americans in charge, using principally American money. The American Ambassador to the United Nations must be considered in the development of foreign policy as he has a day-by-day relationship to it.

It is impossible for the President of the United States to assume personal responsibility for everything men, engaged in the conduct of foreign policy, do.

Before he can assume such responsibility, he must have the power to hire and fire every person engaged in handling foreign relations. In the first place, many important officials who hold such offices must be confirmed by the Senate, which can be a limitation upon the President. Then, the Foreign Service employees are part of the Civil Service and can only be dismissed for cause, or removed within the status that they had attained. In some instances, this is a wholesome provision, developing a career service of experts; in other instances it acts as an umbrella for the inefficient, the doctrinaire, the blabber-mouth.

The President's authority thus is limited by law and by practice and while the Boss is always responsible for the entire works, he must not, in a political situation, act as an umbrella for those who should be separated from government because of their errors.

Constitutionally, it is possible to say that the sole responsibility for every executive and administrative act of government rests upon the President, but what of such agencies as TVA or the FCC or the World Bank? The Hoover Reports have established beyond doubt the inability of any one man to monitor the whole of the American government or any large part of it.

The people are, of course, not concerned with the details of structure; they look at the facade and blame a President for the whole works. Not since Woodrow Wilson's time has a President had a taut, working Administration. The gargantuan characteristics of administration appeared during World War I and have been growing since. Roosevelt increased the physical size of the Executive branch of government as a phase of his solution of the Depression and finally to supply the needs of World War II. What the Eisenhower Administration found, it retained. The result has been a hardening of a temporary bureaucracy into permanency. Such institutions become entrenched and are not easily moved. Often reorganization problems are best solved by establishing a duplicative agency which only mul-

Aid-To-Education Program Still Up In The Air

WASHINGTON - The whole federal aid-to-education program, even as it affects public schools, is up in the air now so far as constitutionality is concerned

The Supreme Court of the United States, by announcing this week its refusal to review a decision by the highest court of the state of Vermont that has barred tuition grants for students in sectarian schools, tends to cast doubt on the constitutionality of even such measures as the "GI Bill of Likewise, a decision rendered just 30 days ago by a circuit court in Dade County, Florida, sets forth a principle that makes it doubtful whether even public schools where Christmas or Easter celebrations or Bible readings take place - a widespread practice throughout the United States -will be eligible for federal-aid grants or loans. The Supreme Court of the United States, it is expected, will be asked to review this case after the highest court in Florida passes on it.

It doesn't seem to make any difference that a particular form of religion is not actually taught in a school or that a student has the opportunity to decline to participate in these celebrations or to attend the Bible readings. For in the Vermont case, where there were no public high schools in a certain school district and the only educational institutions available were Catholic high schools, the Vermont Supreme Court decision of January 3, 1961, described the situation there as follows:

"There is no requirement that students of other denominations attend the instruction in religion although some students in this category have elected to do so."

Notwithstanding this option, the Vermont Court ruled that tax funds may not be used to pay tuition in a church-related school even where there is no public school in the area to serve the pupils. The court held that to do so would violate the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Federal Constitution. It has been argued by able lawyers that, because of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1923 denying a taxpayer the right to sue the federal government in connection with the purposes for which it appro-

Certainly the Administration has not hesitated to undertake the unprecedented role of "intervenor" in the case of Prince Edward County, Virginia, where the parents of students are given tuition grants to help educate their children in private schools.

Indeed, the question is of broad significance, because the U.S. Census Bureau is authority for the statement that more than half of

Hence, private schools and religious schools have borne much of the burden, and if no aid can vide for the right to sue, and be given by tuition grants to the parents in these 21,646 school systems, this whole plan becomes of doubtful effectiveness, and more public schools will have to be

Also New York State's latest plan for tuition grants now becomes open to debate on the constitutional issue, and so does the National Defense Education Act which provides federal aid to private and parochial schools for the equipment of laboratories to teach science, mathematics, and modern languages. SENATORIAL SUBWAY - The Senate's new $4 million subway is operating at last! Complete with terminals, escalators, indirect lighting and smooth-riding new $75,000 cars, the facility is providing transportation for senators, their assistants, and the general public, underground for the blocklong trip between the Senate chamber and the office building.

Everyone who rides the subway appears happy about it. They should be. It's taken more than two years to complete, including tearing down the massive three floors of granite steps on the Senate side of the Capitol, in order to construct a terminal under-

In a couple of weeks, a second new tunnel will be in operation, conveying subway riders to another Senate office building. When the whole arrangement is in operation, it will protect Senate travel from the vicissitudes of the weather, and provide sightseers, particularly the kids, with a new memory of Washington.

Capitol officials have even found a use for the old cars, which have been operating in the old subway for more than 40 years. They'll go to the Smithsonian Institution and be put on display along with other mechanical mementoes of a

The theory of the legislators who are writing these laws is that, if Congress designates a "special purpose," this removes any constitutional objection. Thus, it is argued, if the purpose is national defense - to educate more scientists so as to compete with the Soviet Union - then it's constitutional. But there can be no higher or more important "special purpose" than secondary-school education. If the mere fact that religion may be taught in the same building disqualifies that institution from receiving federal funds, then the school, whether it be public or private, cannot offer persuasively the excuse of a "spe-

In fact, the U.S. Department of today an active participant in a suit in the federal court to require the closing of the public schools in all counties of the State of Virginia - whether integrated or segregated - unless the state closes down a private school in Prince Edward County which is being supported by state grants of funds to parents or students.

Many observers are wondering why the Supreme Court of the United States refused to review the Vermont case, but it may be that this is because the highest court in the land has in the past contradicted itself several times The precedents are by no means clear-cut. Thus, in 1930 the Supreme Court ruled that state tax money could be appropriated to supply free textbooks to private schools, including sectarian schools. Also in 1908 the court. in the case of Catholic Mission Schools on Indian reservations, rejected the argument that the spirit of the constitution required that the federal government "shall make no appropriation for education in any sectarian schools.'

The mixup over legalities is so extensive that about the only way out is for Congress to pass whatever aid-to-education legislation it pleases and provide at the same time for a review by the federal courts of the constitutionality of such legislation.

Many delegates snickered. They were better informed than the chief American delegate.

When the full facts later leaked out and it became known that the United States had backed almost every step of the invasion, Stevenson felt that his usefulness in New York had ended. His future statements before the UN, he felt, would carry no weight. He seriously considered handing in his resignation.

Because some newspapers had predicted, last January, that Stevenson would be the first to leave the Kennedy Administration, he hesitated. Finally he came to Washington for a talk with Kennedy and the two have now patched things up. Stevenson will be kept fully informed in the future. Sit-in For Vice President

Serving as vice president of the United States may be glamorous, but doing its No. 1 duty, presiding over the Senate, is a bore. As a result, the job constantly goes begging. And while Vice President Johnson has been touring the Far East, freshman Senators have been drafted as sit-ins on the Senate rostrum.

Even they, however, sometimes balk. One of these was Sen. Lee Metcalf, Montana Democrat, who recently found himself stuck in the chair for five hours while he tried vainly to draft another freshman to replace him.

Customary procedure is to dispatch a note to a likely substitute. But Metcalf could find no fellow freshman on the floor. They ducked out immediately after

Note - Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota had a sure-fire method of beating the system when he was a freshman. When he grew tired of presiding he sent urgent notes to other newly elected colleagues, saying that he wanted to go to "the washroom." This worked well until one day Humphrey looked around. Only freshman colleague on the floor was Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine

Ignored by the free-spending military is the fact that the total Presidio property, if developed and placed on the tax rolls, would reduce the city's tax rate by 15 per cent. Even the 27 acres set aside for the new military cemetery would help.

San Francisco's Congressman Jack Shelley remembers the "agonizing" decision city voters faced when it was proposed some years ago to move the old established cemeteries of Laurel Hill, Lone Mountain, and Calvary to locations outside the city limits.

"Such relocation was essential to the development of San Francisco, however," said Shelley, "so my family joined the majority of voters in approving it.

three days, I watched Floyd A. Holzapfel in a witness chair. He has since traded it for an electrict chair and, someday soon, he will die in Raiford Prison, Florida. No one has squeezed a tear for Lucky. No one will. "People like us," he said, "should be stamped out like cockroaches."

Floyd was the only man I've seen who looked like a murderer. His eyes were green liquid venom. He could switch from a friendly grin to intense hate at will. He could and did murder people he didn't even know. He had never met Judge C. E. Chillingworth the night he pulled up to the Judge's Palm Beach home in a motorboat and kidnapped the man at gunpoint and took him out to sea, weighted him down, and drowned him.

He felt queasy about drowning Mrs. Chillingworth. He tossed her into the dark Atlantic as her husband yelled: "Remember, I love you." She murmured: love you too," as she disappeared. Bobbie Lincoln, a Negro moonshiner, assisted in the killings.

Bobbie also assisted Floyd in the killing of Lew Gene Harvey, a Jacksonville racketeer. They suspected him of being a police stool pidgeon so they took him in the everglades, shot him in the back of the head while protesting friendship for him, then tied him with a concrete block and tossed him into a canal. Harvey was the only dead person who ever double-crossed Lucky. The moonshiner's body came up out of the canal, concrete block and all. I am, as most of you know, opposed to capital punishment because I have seen five men die in electric chairs and no eraser can fog the memory.

Still, a superficial review of the Chillingworth murders tends to prove that Holzapfel is getting a poor brand of justice. If he dies, his co-plotters, Bobbie Lincoln and Judge Joseph Peel. should die with him. Lincoln will go free, and Peel will serve a life sentence until paroled.

The State Attorney, Phil O'-Connell, worked hard to solve the Chillingworth murders from June 15, 1955, when the judge was declared missing, until October 4, 1960, when O'Connell was ready to spring his trap. Floyd proved, at least to my satisfaction, that Municipal Judge Joe Peel was afraid that Judge Chillingworth was going to have him disbarred. To forestall it, he had his partners in the Palm Beach protection rackets - Lincoln and Holzapfel - commit the murders. Peel had a motive. The other two five years of time to gather wit-guilty conversations in motel business man?

He was a man to study. For rooms before any arrests were Lincoln, the Negro who swindled his own people, stepped forward and offered to tell the whole story. O'Connell accepted him. and granted him immunity in three murders - Judge and Mrs. Chillingworth, and the Lew Gene Harvey killing - in exchange for testimony against Peel.

Bluntly, I don't think that Bobbie Lincoln's testimony could convict anyone in Florida. Holzapfel was picked up and, surprisingly, he became the key to the mystery by pleading guilty and offering to testify for the state with Lincoln.

This gave Prosecutor O'Connell -who had no corpus delicti-an eyewitness to murder (Lincoln) and a conspirator, (Holzapfel), Between the two of them, they could sink Judge Peel, the head man.

I sat through the trial and felt that O'Connell did a masterful job of presenting evidence against Peel. Floyd, who had already pleaded guilty, admitted committing the murders, pointed to Peel, and said: "We did it for Joe." The defense could not shake his story.

Without Lucky, the young judge might have been acquitted. Bobbie Lincoln didn't make a good witness. He's serving time in Chattahoochee and he tried to make it look as though he didn't know that Holzapfel was going to kill the Chillingworths. "Where we goin' in the boat, Floyd?"... "What we gonna do with these people, Floyd?

Still, as any lawyer can tell you, no one is ever certain what a jury will do. The one which tried Joseph Peel will never be hanged for intellect. They found him guilty and recommended mercy. Thus, the big fish that O'Connell was after will not pay with Neither will Lincoln, who is so afraid of retribution that his plans call for fleeing from Florida the moment he gets out of jail. Holzapfel, who confessed, who saved the state the cost of a trial, who had the courage to sit on the witness stand and expose the whole plot - he's the one who gets the No one will shed a tear, except

Yes, but the operation is fraught with danger of complications and is done only in the more serious cases. In some instances the cataract is needled. Liston Is Arrested For Corner-Lounging

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Charles (Sonny) Liston, 28-year-old top contender for Floyd Pattterson's heavyweight boxing title, was arrested on a corner-lounging charge Wednesday. He was discharged at a special magistrate's hearing four hours later.

Patrolman James Best, who made the arrest, said Liston refused to move on when ordered to do so. The patrolman was called to a west Philadelphia intersection on complaints that corner loungers were congregating.

Woman Dies, Four Hurt In Crash

Mrs. James Pfaff Fatally Injured In Collision

A Frostburg woman was fatally injured and four persons were hospitalized last night when two cars collided almost headon on U. S. Route 40 in front of the Eckhart elementary school.

Dead is Mrs. James Conrad Pfaff of McCulloh Street, Frost-

The injured:

-Mrs. Peggy Pfaff Lloyd, Mc-Culloh Street, Frestburg, daughter of Mrs. Pfaff and driver of one of the cars.

-Mrs. Eleanor Lloyd, 48, also of McCulloh Street, who was riding in the car with the two other

-John Robert Boone, 27, of Grand Avenue, Cumberland, -Richard Daniel Abe, 24, of 252 Elder Street, Cumberland.

All four of the injured were admitted to Miners Hospital in Frostburg. Abe was believed to be most seriously hurt, with head, leg and chest injuries.

State Police said the accident happened shortly before 11 p. m. Details were unavailable at midnight, but it was reported that one of the men was found down over an embankment near the scene of the collision. It was not known whether Abe or Boone was
